Diana has a fine arts degree in painting and drawing and was the fine arts teacher at Massey-Vanier High School for thirty-four years.

She started her art training at the Presentation de Marie Convent in Sutton when she was eight years old, a truly magical time. She received encouragement from her mother, an amateur artist, and from a very special aunt, Shirley Darrah Murray, a well-known portrait artist and teacher.

Summer school at the Cowansville Bruck Art Centre and Mount Allison University were very important influences.

Diana has retired from teaching and now enjoys painting aquarelles of the birds and landscapes of her beloved Brome County where her family settled in 1792 and she now resides on a small part of the original property.
